A PLACE IN HISTORY

Tom Quick Inn emerged from the joining of two downtown Milford icons: Center Square, a hotel, and Terwilliger House, a boarding house and restaurant. Even before the buildings were connected, the location became a popular destination for residents throughout the Tri-State area, with guests bicycling across the Delaware River from Port Jervis, NY to dine at Terwilliger House's popular restaurant. In the late 1940s, both properties were purchased by Bob Phillips Sr. and became Tom Quick Inn, although the remnants of both original buildings are respectively listed in the National Registry of Historic Places.

As a Milford Hospitality Group property, today's Tom Quick Inn continues the legacy of Center Square and Terwilliger House by attracting guests from the Tri-State and beyond with inviting rooms and an appetizing menu. In fact, Milford Hospitality Group was formed, in part, to bring Tom Quick Inn back to its rightful place as a community centerpiece and national gem. From upscale dining and craft cocktails, to antique décor and creature comforts, Tom Quick Inn has everything needed for your leisure.
